63 WARN REDS STILL AIM TO RULE WORLD

Policy Unchanged, Say

BY PHILIP DODD

Washington, Sept. 29—Sixty-three grim warnings of the communist intention to rule the world by force and deceit were made public by the house un-American activities committee today.

The warnings were contained in appraisals of internationalist communist strategy written by government officials, military leaders, educators, writers, and experts in the field of business and labor.

The compilation made up the second volume of the committee's two part symposium on "Soviet Total War: The Historic Mission of Violence and Deceit." Most of the material in the 475 page publication was prepared for the committee. Some represented excerpts from previously published writings of the contributors.

No Change in Policy

Among the contributors were Allen W. Dulles, director of the super-secret central intelligence agency and brother of State Secretary Dulles; Gen. Gruenther, supreme Commander of the associated powers in Europe; Harry Anslinger, United States narcotics commissioner; retired Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of the China theatre in World War II, and William C. McGovern, political science professor at Northwestern university.

The dominant theme of the 63 appraisals was that new faces in the Kremlin since the death of Dictator Stalin do not mean any change in Soviet there was "no ground for panic" if the communist menace is recognized for what it is and the "leaders of the free world . . . help to uncover and frustrate the communist design."

Gen. Gruenther said the North Atlantic treaty organization [NATO], which he heads, is threatened by a dictatorship "as unhurried as it is ruthless" and which has more than 7 million "missionaries who believe in their cause with all their hearts and souls."

"Must Match Unity"

"I am sure," he said, "we have in the United States alone 167 million who believe in our system, but believing in it in a passive way is not enough. . . . For us to succeed in this struggle, we are going to have to match their unity by our dedication to our system, and their discipline by our individual effort."

Anslinger told of how communist China is pushing large quantities of opium and heroin thruout the world. The object, he said, is obvious — "demoralization of susceptible 'bourgeoisie'."

The Red Chinese pay particular attention to American military and civilian personnel in the far east, Anslinger said. He added that Red China's opium has been found on the west and east coasts of the United States and as far inland as St. Louis.

Calls for Firm Stand
Gen. Wedemeyer, drawing on his military experiences in the far east, called for a firm stand against proposals that the United States drop its support of the Nationalist Chinese on Formosa and permit the seating of Red China in the United Nations. Such abandonment, he said, would stimulate communist activity in Japan, the Philippines, and all the far east.

Prof. McGovern's paper pointed out that the true disciples of Karl Marx refuse to believe in the possibility of enduring peace between communist and noncommunist nations. They believe, he said, there must be perpetual war between the two, be it hot, cold or lukewarm.

Names Two Examples
Dulles pointed to Czechoslovakia and Guatemala as examples of how the Communists work to undermine free governments. Those are the only instances, he said, in which the Communists have succeeded in "subverting a free government except with the aid of armed force."
